

Teen Demands Liquor From Older Man

A teenager who attempted to get some free liquor by threatening a Fairfield man has been charged by police with extortion.

Police say that Friday night the 16 year - old youth called Paul Doerr of 225 E. Utah St. and told him to leave some alcoholic beverages and magazines in a sheep shed off Claybank Road. The youth allegedly intimidated that harm would befall Doerr if he did not comply.

Doerr notified police and the shed was staked out for several hours, with a bag of papers representing the "loot" inside.

Several hours of observation failed to disclose anything and ice were returning when they noticed a youth walking out Claybank Road.

They returned, saw the youth run to the shed, look around and come back to the road with a cardboard box. The box, which was found to be empty, apparently had been lying near the shed and had no connection with the events.
