

SLAYING

From Page 1

it into the car. Four or five shots were blasted into it without a word being said.

As the killer walked away, Mageau said he screamed. The killer returned and pumped two more slugs into each of them, Mageau said.

He then staggered out of the car. He said he saw some people nearby and tried to get them to come over and help. "But they drove off," Mageau said.

Officers said Mrs. Ferrin, a waitress was still alive when they arrived. She tried to say something but it sounded like "soft moaning" to one officer. Another thought she tried to say "I" or "my" but failed. Her breathing was labored and her pulse rate very weak. She was dead on arrival at the hospital.

Police also have questioned other relatives, friends and fellow employees of the two victims. They plan to question more persons in the hunt for the slayer.